Trading in financial markets associated with a high level of risk in this Notice describes the most common types of risk, their list, however, is not exhaustive.

1. The risks of margin trading

1.1. By using the leverage slight change of course can bring a significant profit or loss. Customer acknowledges that it can lose some or all of the invested funds in the event of adverse changes in exchange rates or other tools.

1.2. The Company is not responsible for any losses incurred by the Client as a result of choosing the wrong trading strategy or neglect Client money management rules.

2. Technical Risks

2.1. The customer assumes the risks associated with faulty software, telecommunications equipment and other technical problems.

2.2. The Company is not responsible for any losses incurred by the Client as a result of ignorance of the instructions of the client terminal UTIP.

2.3. The customer assumes the risk of making unplanned transactions in case of re-sending the order to the receipt of the result of the previous order processing.

2.4. The client is obliged to keep passwords and be convinced that third parties do not have access to the trading system. The client will be directly responsible for trading, carried out by the Client's password even if it has been used by a third party.

2.5. Customer acknowledges that the information transmitted in unencrypted form (by e-mail, instant messaging), not protected against unauthorized access.

3. Force majeure

3.1. The Company is not responsible for any losses incurred by the Client as a result of force majeure: war, terrorist attacks, natural disasters, suspension of trading in the financial markets, foreign exchange intervention, decisions of governments, instability in the financial markets with a sharp decline in the liquidity and other significant changes in circumstances works contractors.